

Tiara Air is back in the air!

After a twenty-eight day hiatus due to an administrative snafu, Tiara Air resumed regular flights to Curacao and Punto Fijo on Saturday, April 14. Director of Tiara Air, Alejandro Muyale, and Commercial Manager Camilo Muyale explained that the stoppage of service was due to misfiling of essential paperwork with the Aruban Department of Civil Aviation, and that has been corrected. The Department of Civil Aviation issued a full certification for Tiara Air to continue service.

Additionally, Mr. Muyale announced that one of their two planes just returned from a routine service in the United States, and the inspectors in Aruba have examined both planes and certified them in excellent condition. The second plane has just departed to the U.S. for a routine service, but this will not interfere with their daily schedule. He apologizes to their loyal customers for the interruption in service, reminding all that during that time they did their best to see passengers placed on other airlines.

During a press conference attended by Hubert Zievenger, Operations Manager and Patrick Croes, head pilot, Mr. Muyale reminded the public that Tiara Air has moved their offices to Sabana Blanco 70-E, next to the Texaco Station near the airport. He also informed the press that Tiara Air offers private charters on their planes, a Short 360 with a capacity of thirty passengers, for groups wishing to travel to Bonaire. He suggests visiting their website www.Tiara-Air.com for more information and to make reservations, or telephone 588-4272.
